CONTENTS OF VOLUME XXVIII

January

The Truly Psychological Behaviorism: MARY WHITON CALKINS, 1.
An Attempt toward a Naturalistic Description of Emotions (I): J. R. KANTOR, 19.
The Affective Tone of Lines: Experimental Researches: HELGE LUNDHOLM, 43.
The Law of Habituation: STEPHEN C. PEPPER, 61.
The Effect of Caffein and Acetanilid on Simple Reaction Time: WALTER SCHILLING, 72.

March

Cerebral-mental Relations: SHEPHERD IVORY FRANZ, 81.
The Misuse of Instinct in the Social Sciences: L. L. BERNARD, 96.
An Attempt toward a Naturalistic Description of Emotions (II): J. R. KANTOR, 120.
On the Organization of Intellect: EDWARD L. THORNDIKE, 141.

May

In Memory of Wilhelm Wundt: BY HIS AMERICAN STUDENTS, 153.
The Structure of Animal Learning: J. A. MELROSE, 189.
A Poet's Portrayal of Emotion: FRANCES THERESA RUSSELL, 222.

July

Dynamic Psychology and the Problem of Motivation: HORACE BIDWELL ENGLISH, 239.
Psychology and the Central Nervous System: HOWARD C. WARREN, 249.
Apperceptive Abilities: AUGUSTA F. BRONNER, 270.
The Motivation of Radicalism: A. B. WOLFE, 280.
The Control of Another Person by Obscure Signs: G. M. STRATTON, 301.

September

Belief as a Derived Emotion: WILLIAM MCDOUGALL, 315.
How do we Acquire our Basic Reactions?: J. R. KANTOR, 328.
Fact and Inference in Raymond Wheeler's Doctrine of Will and Self-Activity: MARY WHITON CALKINS, 356.
The Correlation Between Interests and Abilities in College Courses: EDWARD L. THORNDIKE, 374.
A Device for Determining Coefficients of Partial Correlation: CLARK L. HULL, 377.

November

Association as a Fundamental Process of Objective Psychology: J. R. KANTOR, 385.
Sensation, Imagination and Consciousness: J. E. BOODIN, 425.
Some Unusual Visual After-Effects: HOWARD C. WARREN, 453.

61156

XUM

XUM